Topic:

The Caroig Massif and its surroundings are undoubtedly one of the most prominent Valencian relief units. The orographic complexity of this territory has resulted in low demographic rates, which have allowed for the preservation of a valuable landscape, botanical, zoological and ethnological heritage. It is also worth mentioning the importance of watercourses and other aquifers, which have turned this corner of the province of Valencia into a first-order water reserve.

All these environmental and cultural assets make this a special place, with an economic potential which, if managed properly, can turn it into a model of sustainable development that respects the natural and historical heritage which at the same time generates wealth to its inhabitants. The Office of the Vice-Principal for Territorial Projection and Participation of the University of Valencia shows us with this exhibition the most important characteristic of a territory that, despite its beauty and uniqueness, remains unknown to many Valencian people.
