

Javier Esplugues

Advisory Office Director at Bankia

Curriculum Vitae

He holds a degree in Economics by the University of Valencia, MSc in Economics by the University of Glasgow (financed by the Stevenson Foundation) and postgraduate studies in Economics and Finance by the CEMFI (Center of Monetary and Financial Studies of the Bank of Spain, financed by Caja Madrid). He also holds a "European Financial Advisor" title (awarded by EFPA).

He has held several positions in the Marketing area of Bancaja for 16 years, being finally the Commercial Action department director, where he designed and managed the entity's marketing plan. Under this responsibility, he was up to the commercial coordination with the investees, additionally participating in the development of different strategic plans for the bank. He was also member of the Board of Directors at Hal Cash and Hal Cash International. He is currently working as Advisory Office Director at Bankia. Additionally, he was a director of Hooptap, a startup. He is currently pursuing a PhD in the field of health economics, specifically in the field of transition from biologic drugs to biosimilars.

Besides its main activity, he has been Part-time Professor in the Department of Economic Structure at the University of Valencia during several periods for 9 years in total. He is a member of the Foundation Juan Esplugues Board of Trustees as its treasurer.