Both institutions consider it desirable to develop collaborative research initiatives in order to achieve greater effectiveness and efficiency in their respective fields;

Both parties agree to establish a framework within which successive actions can be performed.

And so, under the legislation on doctoral studies in force in the respective countries of the signatory institutions, both parties agree to the signing of this specific agreement for the international joint supervision of doctoral theses, in accordance with the following

PROVISIONS

One. PURPOSE OF THE AGREEMENT

This agreement aims at establishing the general conditions for institutional collaboration between the two universities for the international joint supervision of the doctoral thesis set out in the annex to this document.

Two. DURATION OF DOCTORAL STUDIES

The research work leading to the formulation of the thesis that will be carried out in both universities may not exceed three full-time years or five part-time years.

This period may exceptionally be extended only after a favourable report from the University XXXX and the University of Valencia, and at the suggestion of the doctoral student by agreement with the thesis supervisors. Any request for deferral must be made at least six months before the date set for completion of the thesis and must comply with the legal regulations regarding the duration of and continuance in doctoral studies.

Three. TUITION FEES AND REGISTRATION OF THE THESIS

Doctoral students must register their PhD project at the two universities, according to their respective applicable rules.

Tuition fees for academic supervision, or equivalent services, must be paid annually in the university hosting the longer stay.

Doctoral students will benefit from the services and infrastructure at both universities.

Any changes of supervisor must be notified to the doctoral student and to the other university. Otherwise, this agreement would automatically lapse. In such cases, doctoral students must be guaranteed the right to finish their doctoral studies at the other supervisor's institution.

The thesis must be written in the official language of one of the signatory universities and both the abstract and the conclusions must use a language that is official at the other university.

If the thesis is drawn up in English, the abstract and the conclusions must be written in duplicate in the official languages of both institutions. The languages chosen both for the writing and for the defence must be stated in the annex.
