1. Event: Measuring Progress: Online Forum on Well-Being

This international event will bring together leading thinkers to discuss the quest for better lives. Economists traditionally advocated economic growth as the foremost policy goal, but now even economists often challenge this view. How should we measure progress? The discussion remains open, indeed flourishes, with more contributors than ever. The event contributes broadly to this discussion. Preeminent authors from the well-being and quality-of-life fields will give six talks over three days. Talks will focus on their current research and include both the broader background and policy implications. At the end of each session, time will be reserved for questions and answers.

Measuring Progress:

The poster features a background of green and blue triangles. On the right, there is a white box with the text 'STATEC RESEARCH' and a circular logo for the 'INTERNATIONAL SOCIETY FOR QUALITY OF LIFE STUDIES' with a tree and hands, and 'EST. 1995'.
