

---

MASTER'S DEGREE IN DEVELOPMENT AID (IIDL, University of Valencia)

The Direction of the Master's Degree in Development Aid (MCAD) of the Inter-University Institute of Local Development (IIDL) of the University of Valencia (Spain) invites you to meet our Master program considering it as completely relevant for students, researches and practitioners working on social sciences and health fields, among others, in Latin America

The MCAD offers for the 2019-2020 academic year two specialization pathways: Comprehensive Planning of Local Development and Health in Developing Countries. The main objectives of the Master are:

- To deeply address the operative strategies of quality and effectiveness of the cooperation for development concept from a critical perspective.
- To provide criteria for analysing the social, economic, politic and cultural reality in which the approaches and topics of a new culture of cooperation are promoted the international level
- To develop skills in design, planning, management and evaluation of development actions.

This Master's is a European Official Degree which provides access to the Official Inter-University PhD Program on Local Development and International Cooperation. General information about the Master's, its curriculum and faculty is attached.

A call for complete scholarships for the course the 2019-2020 academic year addressed to students from developing countries will be announced shortly in the website of the University of Valencia: <http://www.uv.es/uvweb/universidad/es/relaciones-internacionales/cooperacion/noticias-1285865630323.html>

Information about applications and admissions can be found at: postgrau@uv.es

For further inquiry please check the website www.uv.es/mcad or contact directly the IIDL through the e-mail mcad@uv.es or the phone number (+34) 961625414.

Regards,

Fdo: Ana Sales Ten
Directora del Mcad.UV