SUMMARYABSTRACT

In this course we propose to make an approach to gender and its historiographical analysis. From the perspectives generated by the new trends, particularly Women's and Gender History, we want to offer an approach to the complexity and diversity of experiences, and also to the interaction between the context (social, economic, cultural and political) and the individual and collective strategies.

PREVIOUS KNOWLEDGERELATIONSHIP TO OTHER SUBJECTS OF THE SAME DEGREE

There are no specified enrollment restrictions with other subjects of the curriculum.

TEACHING METHODOLOGY

TEACHING METHODOLOGY

- Classroom teaching will be developed encouraging active participation by students, and combining theoretical contents and practical work.
- Complementary activities will be done along the course. They could be organized by the Faculty and/or scheduled by professors teaching the subject in the different groups.

- For further details, please consult the annexes to the teaching guide.

EVALUATION

EVALUATION

The final evaluation will be the result of the different tests and activities along the course:

- a) A final theoretical exam with questions related to the subject and the recommended readings.
- b) Practical activities, which will be evaluated along the course.
- c) Attendance and active participation in classes and other activities.

In summary:

Final exam - 60%

Controls of content assimilation or practical works (maximum of 2, in total) - 30%

Complementary activities (attendance and presentation of the corresponding reports) - 10%

Note: A minimum score of 4 points will be required in the exam, in order to incorporate the qualification of the rest of the activities.

The marks of the complementary activities will be kept for the second call of the same academic year.

Excepting Erasmus students, grammar and spelling mistakes will score negatively on the qualification of all written tests and academic works. Their accumulation may lead to a failing grade in the course.
