OTHER REQUIREMENTSCOMPETENCES / LEARNING OUTCOMES*1200 - Degree in Nursing

Analyse and reflect on the consequences of being a woman and a man in the process of getting sick, the differential attention received and the specific way of dealing with pain and illness.

Bachelor's thesis. Cross-disciplinary subject area involving work related to different subjects.

Encourage and respect the patient's right to be involved, informed, independent and to give informed consent when decisions are taken, in accordance with their experience of the process of health-illness and death.

Establish truthful, effective and respectful communication with patients, family, social groups, other professionals and the media, both orally and in writing, and promote health education.

Have a critical, creative, constructive and research-oriented point of view in professional practice.

Identify people's psychosocial responses to different health situations (in particular, illness and suffering), selecting the appropriate actions to provide help in these situations. Establish an empathic and respectful relationship with the patient and family, according to the person's situation, health problem and stage of development. Use strategies and skills that enable effective communication.

Know and apply communication techniques and tools from a non-sexist perspective, both in interpersonal relationships and in group dynamics.

Reflect on the importance of gender analysis in health, and understand how, depending on lifestyles, the use of time and working conditions have an impact on people's health.

Understand and identify the psychological and physical problems derived from gender violence to train students in the prevention, early detection, care and rehabilitation of the victims of this type of violence.

Understand a person's interactive behaviour based on gender, group or community, within their social and multicultural context.
