This subject studies some of the most relevant institutions conventionally situated within the so-called special part of Administrative Law. We will study the non-contractual civil liability of Public Administrations, public procurement, the legal regime for public employment, public assets regulation and the most important types of administrative activity. Finally, as reference sectors where administrative action is of particular importance, we will analyse the legal regime of administrative intervention in relation to economic activity and environmental protection.

TEACHING METHODOLOGY

Presentation of theoretical content of the subject. Each lecturer will explain the fundamental elements that should guide students in the study and understanding of the subject. The student, for his or her part, must actively engage in the learning process by reading, prior to the lecturer's explanation, the materials, manuals, monographs or texts provided or previously indicated. These face-to-face classes are the privileged vehicle for the transmission of knowledge in an orderly and coherent manner, emphasising the most basic and structural issues, as well as the more complex ones that require more attention or explanation. During these sessions, in addition, the teaching team in charge will be available to students to resolve doubts and clarify concepts.

Applied activities and practices: These activities will consist in commenting on judgements, rulings or other materials to ensure their complete and correct understanding, as well as the resolution of practical cases or equivalent activities, through which students must develop the aforementioned competences. Through these activities, students will be introduced to and accustomed to the use of materials and techniques specific to the discipline.

These activities will be carried out as a complement to the lecturer's presentation of theoretical knowledge. They can also be carried out outside the time allocated to classroom explanation of the subject, either prior to the classroom lecture or after it. They will be participatory and each teacher will indicate, where appropriate, which ones will be assessed as part of the continuous assessment, under what conditions and according to which criteria.

Complementary activities: Each lecturer responsible for the subject will participate in at least one workshop or, alternatively, will hold a course or seminar related to the subject (at the day or days assigned for this purpose), which will be scheduled in the context of the subject and will preferably consist of activities specific to the subject or of an interdisciplinary or cross-disciplinary nature. These activities, whenever possible, will be carried out in coordination with groups of the same subject or with other subjects. In any case, these activities will form part of the content to be assessed in the continuous assessment.

Directed activities: Both for the monitoring of the theoretical exposition and the performance of the applied activities, the lecturer will indicate which readings, search of sentences or preparation of cases, etc., must be carried out by the student. Although it is not the subject of classroom work, the lecturer may also schedule, within the student's workload, other activities that serve to reinforce or review the knowledge acquired by the student.

Attendance at tutorials and individualised attention to students: In order to make enquiries on any subject or aspect related to the subject and its work dynamics, students may attend, during the timetable set by each lecturer, the tutorials and other areas of individualised attention designed in the appendix to the teaching guide. In any case, the timetables and modalities of tutoring and attention will have to respect the minimums established by the Universitat de València, either in its face-to-face format, or in the cases in which they are carried out on-line.

EVALUATION

The work carried out during the academic year will be assessed through the evaluation of the complementary and practical activities defined by each teacher in their Annex, which reflect the students' progress in learning this discipline, their participation in class and the results of the final exam.

The final exam will be held at the place and date established in the official calendar. The exam will be public and, if it is oral, the recording of the exercise will be guaranteed for the appropriate purposes.

The assessment will evaluate the content and skills acquired, mainly the ability to relate legal-administrative concepts, the ability to reason legally, and clarity of presentation.

The final exam will account for 70% of the final grade and the complementary and applied activities will account for 30%.

Only if the final exam is passed with a minimum grade of 5 out of 10 will the continuous assessment be weighted.

Continuous assessment activities will not be recoverable when, due to their nature, it is not possible to design a test that assesses the acquisition of learning outcomes in the second sitting. The condition of non-recoverable activity must be reflected in the annex to the teaching guide or communicated to students when it is proposed during the course.

Regardless of the general assessment system established for all students (written or oral exam), the lecturers responsible for the subject may determine in the annex to the syllabus the possibility of changing the final exam modality when they are forced to hold the exam on a date other than the official one in application of the rules established for the case of coincidence of exams in the Regulations for Assessment and Grading of the Undergraduate and Master's Degrees of the University of Valencia, or any other regulatory cause established (e.g. justified force majeure). gr. cases of justified force majeure). In these cases, the new type of exam to be taken must maintain the same level of demand and difficulty as the one taken in general for the rest of the group.

Students who have followed the continuous assessment and have been assessed, in the event of not taking the final exam on the official exam date (both in 1st and 2nd call), will obtain the grade of NOT PRESENTED.
