TEACHING METHODOLOGY

The methodology will combine theoretical and practical activities. Theory is considered to be the exposition of the historical, cultural and contextual contents necessary for the understanding and analysis of the study texts.

The commented reading of the poems is considered practical, and the complementary one searches, in bibliographic resources, for the points of reference that explain them.

The teacher will facilitate the use of the Virtual Classroom, and will use it regularly, both to make study texts available to students and to report incidents. He will also be available to students during the corresponding tutorial hours for queries related to the class subject.

Theoretical teaching:

In the theoretical teaching, the teacher will expose the historical-cultural context and the rhetorical elements from which the poetic work of the different authors studied is configured. The methodology of the lecture will be combined with the comparative study and analysis of the texts from the historical-cultural perspective.

Practical teaching:

Practical teaching will direct students to reading, linguistic comprehension and rhetorical-poetic analysis of the texts under study, in accordance with patterns of cultural history, and also making use of what they have learned with the specific bibliography that the teacher will make available to them.

Within the framework of the cycle Authors in the Classroom, sessions with guest speakers may be organized. At the beginning of the teaching period of the subject, information will be provided on the possible complementary activities that will be organised and the impact they may have on teaching and assessment.

Intellectual honesty is vital in academic communities and for the fair evaluation of students' work. All papers submitted in this course must be of original authorship. The mere substitution in a source text of elements of textual cohesion, such as connectors, or the use of synonymy do not prevent the result from constituting plagiarism. Works that use fraudulent collaboration or composition with the help of artificial intelligence (ChatGPT or others) will not be accepted.

Intellectual honesty is vital in academic communities and for the fair evaluation of the student's work. All work submitted in this course must be of original authorship. Submissions that involve fraudulent collaboration or composition with the aid of artificial intelligence (ChatGPT or others) will not be accepted, unless their use is part of the course content and is authorized by the lecturer.

EVALUATION

Evaluation criteria.

Theory:

A written exam will consider and evaluate the student's learning in this section, through the expository response to questions on aspects of topics covered in the corresponding classes, while demonstrating sufficient knowledge of the literary texts studied throughout the course. The student will have to demonstrate both the knowledge acquired and the competence in writing academic texts. This part will constitute 70% of the final grade.

Practice:

Practice. Throughout the practical classes, literary comments on texts will be made and will be corrected by the teacher. For evaluation purposes, on the day of the exam, the comment on a text will be evaluated in line with those made in the practical classes. This part will constitute 30% of the final grade. In the second call, the assessable practice will also be carried out on the same day as the exam.

The same criteria for textual correction and the requirement for competence in writing academic texts, applicable to the theoretical exam, will be applied in this test.

Following the guidelines of the Department of Catalan Philology, making more than five regulatory errors in the exam for this subject will automatically result in a final grade of failure.

The grading system follows the regulations of the University of Valencia approved by the Consell de Govern on May 30, 2017. ACGUV 108/2017.

Assessment Summary:

Avaluation tests	% final mark
a) Written test on practice (30%)	30%
b) Written test on theory (70%)	70%
