Through the course contents and activities, students will achieve the following learning outcomes: they will produce short and simple oral and written texts appropriate to basic communicative situations in German; deliver simple oral presentations with comprehensible pronunciation, basic vocabulary, and coherent discourse structure; recognize and correctly apply fundamental grammatical structures of German corresponding to level 1; identify and analyse simple syntactic structures, establishing comparisons with the languages they already know in order to foster metalinguistic reflection and autonomous learning; understand the main ideas of short and simple written and oral texts, and be able to summarise them using basic comprehension and expression strategies; and express simple personal opinions on everyday or general-interest topics, while respecting the lexical and grammatical limits of level A1, and demonstrate a respectful and reflective attitude in intercultural communicative contexts. The students will identify and understand, from the perspective of the specific field of study, the inequalities based on sex and gender in society; and will integrate the different needs and preferences related to sex and gender into the design of solutions and problem-solving processes.

TEACHING METHODOLOGY

The methodology we use in the subject German Language 1 is based on communicative and student-centered approaches, ensuring an effective and motivating learning experience. The key aspects of our methodology are as follows:

1. Communicative Approach:

The communicative approach is the cornerstone of our methodology. At the A1 level, the priority is the students' ability to interact in everyday and simple situations. Activities such as dialogues, conversations, and role-playing games are used to practice and develop their oral expression and listening comprehension skills in authentic contexts. Constant interaction in German fosters linguistic immersion, which is essential for initial learning.

2. Task-Based Language Learning (TBLT):

At this introductory level, tasks are designed to be simple but meaningful. For example, students can work in pairs to plan a simple trip, describe their daily routine, or shop in a store. With these tasks, they not only practice using basic vocabulary and grammar but also develop practical skills they will need in real-life situations.

3. Blended Learning:

We combine face-to-face classes with online resources to enrich the learning process. We use digital platforms where students can access interactive exercises, videos, and language practice applications. This allows flexibility that adapts to different learning paces and facilitates autonomous study outside the classroom.

4. Competency-Based Approach:

From the beginning, we focus on developing the four basic skills: listening comprehension, speaking, reading comprehension, and writing. Each class incorporates activities that integrate these skills in a balanced way. For example, a typical lesson might include listening to a simple dialogue, practicing questions and answers, reading a short text, and writing simple sentences and/or a brief text on the corresponding topic.

5. Autonomous and Personalized Learning:

We encourage student autonomy by providing tools and resources so they can continue learning outside the classroom. They are encouraged to use language learning apps, do additional exercises, and participate in cultural activities related to German. Personalization is achieved through individual progress tracking and adapting activities to the specific needs of each student.

6. Cultural Approach:

We introduce cultural elements from the first day to provide a richer and more motivating context. Students learn the customs, traditions, and cultural aspects of German-speaking countries, which not only enriches their cultural knowledge but also helps them better understand the use of the language in different contexts.

7. Formative and Summative Assessment:

Assessment is an essential component of our methodology. We use formative assessments to provide continuous feedback to students, helping them identify areas for improvement and consolidate their learning. Regarding summative assessment, students will take various tests throughout the semester to measure progress and ensure that the A1 level objectives have been achieved.

In summary, our methodology for the subject German Language 1 is designed to be interactive, student-centered, and with a strong cultural component. Through these approaches, we aim not only to teach the foreign language but also to inspire a love for the German language and its cultures, preparing our students for effective and meaningful communication in their new language.

Important note: The progression of German language learning during the Degree is very fast and it is strongly recommended that the student reinforces the knowledge acquired through the multiple tools available at the University of Valencia (CAL, tandems, etc.) and other specialised centres. It is important to bear in mind that for a future Erasmus stay at a German university, a B2 level is recommended - and often required - in order to be able to study in Germany satisfactorily.

In German Language 1, students will begin their learning of the German language with an integrated approach that not only enables them to develop basic linguistic skills but also contributes to their personal and social well-being, in line with the United Nations' Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs).

- Health and Well-being (SDG 3): The course is taught in a positive learning environment that promotes mental and emotional well-being, with activities designed to reduce stress and increase motivation.

- Quality Education (SDG 4): An inclusive and equitable education will be provided, using innovative teaching methods and updated didactic resources. Students will develop critical and creative skills that will allow them to communicate effectively in a global context.

- Gender Equality (SDG 5): Gender equality will be promoted through equal and respectful treatment of all students, and study materials will include references and examples that reflect gender diversity and avoid stereotypes. Equitable participation in class will be a priority.

This course is designed for students to not only learn the German language but also to develop as global citizens, conscious and committed to the principles of sustainability and equity.

EVALUATION

The assessable activities, along with their percentages in the final grade, are as follows:

- a) Individual video (10%) resit-eligible
- b) Individual exercises on course content (10%) resit-eligible
- c) Group project (10%) not resit-eligible
- d) Written composition in class (10%) not resit-eligible
- e) Oral exam (10%) resit-eligible
- f) Written exam (50%) resit-eligible
 - f.1) Use of German and written expression: 30%
 - f.2) Listening comprehension and reading comprehension: 20%

To pass the written exam, it is necessary to achieve a minimum score of 50% in each of the two sections: (f.1) and (f.2). Only students who have previously passed the written exam may take the oral exam. To pass the course, it is essential to pass both the written and the oral exams. In the second sitting, the entire written exam must be repeated, i.e. both blocks. The marks of the other sections will be maintained for the second sitting.

The guidelines for the individual video and group project will be communicated at the beginning of the semester. Both must address a topic worked on in class.

The reading comprehension test of the written exam will include a question related to a mandatory reading, which will also be announced at the beginning of the course.

In the second exam session, all assessable activities will be eligible for resit, except for the group project (c) and the in-class written composition (d).

Assessment criteria

The degree of acquisition of the competences corresponding to the A1 level of the Common European Framework of Reference for Languages (CEFR) in comprehension and production, both oral and written, will be assessed. Basic grammatical correctness, lexical adequacy, textual coherence in simple productions, as well as global and specific understanding of texts adapted to the level, will be taken into account. In oral productions, comprehensible pronunciation and basic fluency will be valued. Furthermore, the student's attitude towards learning will be considered, especially active participation in class, punctual submission of assignments, and individual effort throughout the course.

Intellectual honesty is a fundamental value in the academic field and an essential requirement for fair assessment of student work. All submitted work must be original. Work produced through fraudulent collaboration or the use of artificial intelligence tools (ChatGPT or others) will not be accepted unless their use is explicitly authorized by the teaching staff within the framework of the course content.

The general grading system will comply with the current regulations of the University of Valencia, in accordance with the provisions of the Governing Council dated May 30, 2017 (ACGUV 108/2017).
