SUMMARY

English Language 1 is a first-semester, first-year subject within the General Philological Training module (basic training module) of the Degree in English Studies and the Degree in Translation and Interlinguistic Mediation at the University of Valencia (curriculum approved in 2010). It is also offered as a second language for the degrees in Modern Languages and their Literatures, Catalan Philology, Hispanic Studies, and Classical Philology.

Within the English Studies degree, this subject is closely linked to the seven core subjects under the English Language: Instrumental Training module, as well as to the subjects in the Linguistics of the English Language strand: English Phonology, English Morphology and Lexicon, History of the English Language, English Syntax, and Acquisition and Teaching of English as a Foreign Language.

The primary objective of this subject is to develop students' English communication skills, particularly reading comprehension and written expression, to B2 level across a variety of contexts. Additionally, the course fosters independent learning, self-assessment, and remedial work with the instructor.

Summary of Linguistic Content in English Language 1:
Students will be introduced to the concept of register and its core components: field, mode, and tenor. The subject includes practical activities and examples, with a particular focus on academic English and the writing process, from paragraph structure to essay writing.

TEACHING METHODOLOGY

For students to reach the required level of English and develop other competences which are also specified in this syllabus, the following methodological approaches will be implemented:

(1) The lecturer will formally present key concepts and also counsel, facilitate, organize, monitor, liaise, correct and assess students.

(2) The lecturer will promote student-centred activities through some or all of the following: individual work, pair work, group work, problem solving, project work, and task-based learning.

Autonomous and/or group learning inside and outside the classroom, including computer-based activities, will be encouraged.

At the beginning of the course, the lecturer will provide information about the dates for ongoing assessment activities.

This course incorporates the following Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) into its content:

SDG 5 Gender equality

SDG 10 Reduced inequalities

This course, specifically in the Degree in Translation and Interlinguistic Mediation (English), was selected for the ForTrad (Translation Training) teaching innovation project during the 2023-24 academic year.

EVALUATION

ASSESSMENT FOR FIRST AND SECOND SITTINGS:

A) Final individual exam, which includes a reading test, a use of English test, and a written expression test: 80%
B) Activities completed during the course: 20%
Total: 100%

To pass the course, students must obtain at least 50% overall, based on the average of parts A and B. Students must also achieve a minimum of 50% in each section of part A.
The grade for the coursework activities (part B) will only be counted if the student passes part A.

Assessment criteria:

Students must demonstrate that they have understood the concepts introduced by their instructors. They must also show that they have learned the lexical, grammatical, and functional components required to be used in the multiple contexts studied in class. In addition, students must demonstrate that they have reached a B2 level of competence, and that they have satisfactorily acquired the other specific competencies described in the learning outcomes (section 5) and course contents (section 6).

If a student fails any section of the exam (part A) in the first sitting, they will be required to retake all sections of the exam. The 20% grade from part B will be carried over to the second sitting. These activities (part B) can only be completed during the course and cannot be submitted for the second sitting.

Plagiarism will not be tolerated: it is a serious academic offense. Any student found to have committed plagiarism will fail the entire course. For more information on what plagiarism is and how to avoid it, see: www.uv.es/englishphil/plagiarism.

Intellectual honesty is vital in academic communities and for the fair assessment of students' work. All work submitted for this course must be original. Work involving fraudulent collaboration will not be accepted. The use of artificial intelligence tools must comply with the provisions of the "Code of Practice for the Responsible Use of Artificial Intelligence (AI) in Teaching and Assessment Activities at the Universitat de València" or any regulations that may replace them. The teaching staff reserves the right to request an interview if there are reasonable grounds to suspect that artificial intelligence has been used fraudulently in the completion of any assessed task.

The general grading system will follow the regulations of the University of Valencia, approved by the Governing Council on 30 May 2017. ACGUV 108/2017.
