TEACHING METHODOLOGY

The methodology will be dynamic and functional. Students will be required to participate in in-class activities, as the course follows a continuous assessment model (based on the cumulative sum of exercises and written tests).. In any case, class attendance is mandatory, except in cases of demonstrated need.

EVALUATION

The maximum score is 100 %. In the file, it will appear in base 10, which is the maximum score of the rating system. The evaluation of this subject is continuous and is based on different tests:

1. Written and oral tests, consisting of one or more exams comprised of both theoretical and practical questions (60 %).

2. Evaluation of practical activities based on the preparation of a group project (15 %) and its presentation (5 %).
3. Continuous individual assessment, based on the completion of final exercises for each unit (20 %).

Continuous assessment exams will only be held on the specified dates and cannot be rescheduled (except in cases of illness with a medical certificate). Both the partial exams and the submission of various assignments will take place throughout the semester.

On the official exam date for the first examination session, students will have the opportunity to submit any pending assignments or take any exams they were unable to attend during the course. However, they will not be allowed to retake any assessments they have failed. On the official exam date for the second examination session, the student may retake any assessments previously failed or submit the group project, if it was not delivered or passed. However, the oral presentation and the final practical tasks for each unit cannot be repeated, as these are non-recoverable activities. The percentages of this second announcement would be as follows:

1. Written and oral tests, consisting of one or more tests covering both theoretical and practical content (80 %).
2. Assessment of practical activities, based on the completion of the group project (20 %).

VERY IMPORTANT:

In order for the grades obtained from the various activities carried out during the course to be considered in the final mark, the student must achieve at least 40% in the tests.
