SUMMARY

This course focuses on reviewing the main practices developed by the human resource management (HRM) function, although having in mind a strategic point of view. The different topics are grouped in two parts. The first part deals with the formulation of HRM strategy. The second part revolves around the implementation of the HRM strategy through the fundamental policies and practices that are typical of this function.

TEACHING METHODOLOGY

This course differentiates between 'theory' and 'practice' classes. Theory classes will mainly revolve around the lecturer's presentation of the contents of the different topics. However, students will be encouraged to participate actively in the theory lessons, and the lecturer may recommend students to do some prior reading or preparatory activity before some of the theory sessions.

Practice sessions will be mostly based on – though not limited to – teamwork dynamics, according to the indications that the lecturer will deliver in due course. If appropriate, the lecturer will upload onto 'aula virtual' support materials – related to theory classes and/or practice assignments to – be used by students.

All classes are of compulsory attendance.

The use of Artificial Intelligence, and any other type of similar tool, will be allowed to be applied, both to classroom work and autonomous work, as long as the student incorporates a declaration of responsible use into these tasks, indicating, in each case, the source and parts of the work affected

EVALUATION

Assessment of students' performance combines two components:

a) Practice component (40% of course grade), basically based on continuous assessment (CA) throughout the semester, graded by evaluating students' performance related to (individual and team) practice assignments and, if appropriate, to the amount and quality of class participation. Attendance to practice classes is compulsory and class attendance will be controlled.

b) Theory component (60% of course grade), basically based on a final exam to be taken at the end of the term, aimed at assessing students' knowledge of the different topics that comprise the course contents. Attendance to theory classes, although not officially compulsory, is highly recommended, since the exam will be based on contents of such classes. Students' active participation in theory classes, provided it is of a high quality, may also have some influence on the final course grade.

Each section must be passed to be eligible for the calculation of the overall average for the course. Students are then entitled to a second call for the failed theoretical section and for the recoverable continuous assessment section. Classroom participation cannot be recovered in the second call and is worth 1 point out of 4. The remaining 3 points for continuous assessment may only be recovered in the second call through a final exam on a practical case study covering the entire continuous assessment.

Following article 28 of the Regulation of linguistic uses of the University of Valencia (*ACGUV 167/2014, of September 30, modified by *ACGUV 146/2023), the statements of the exams and exercises will be presented in the language in which they are presented. has officially offered the subject
