SUMMARY

This course addresses key elements of contemporary societies such as human mobility, cultural diversity, both on the rise, as well as citizenship, a concept linked to the full entitlement of rights. The aim of this course is for students to understand the evolution of citizenship and its current issues, and to be able to develop an understanding of migration and the management of cultural diversity today.

Approaching these topics will enhance students' critical thinking regarding essential social, political, and legal issues.

EVALUATION

The knowledge and skills acquired will be assessed, particularly those related to the presentation, confrontation, and weighing of reasons and arguments (dialogic argumentation), the connection between the different issues addressed, and the critical evaluation of the various doctrinal positions from the standpoint of their foundation and practical implications.

The evaluation system will be based on two elements:

- a) Final exam. Written and/or oral test(s), consisting of one or more exams that may be objective and include theoretical questions and/or problems. This will account for 60% of the final grade.
- b) Continuous assessment activities. Evaluation of papers, reports, and/or oral presentations on proposed activities, either individually or collectively. This will account for 25% of the final grade.
- c) Attendance and participation. Continuous assessment of each student, based on regular attendance and active participation in the proposed face-to-face activities, such as practical exercises or participation in workshops, taking into account the degree of involvement and effort of the students in the teaching-learning process and the skills and attitudes shown during the development of these activities. This will account for 15% of the final grade.

Activities that constitute continuous assessment (whether not completed or submitted within the stipulated deadline, or already completed or evaluated) will not be recoverable after the submission date, nor for the second examination period (with the continuous assessment grade obtained during the semester being maintained for this).

Regardless of the general evaluation system established for all students (written or oral exam), the professor in charge of the subject will be able to reasonably determine in the annex to the course syllabus the possibility of changing the modality of the final exam when a student needs to take it on a date different from the official one, in application of the rules for exam clashing, or any other cause established by the examination regulation (e.g., cases of justified force majeure). In these cases, the new modality of exam to be taken must maintain the same level of stringency and difficulty as the one generally given to the rest of the group.

The students who have followed the continuous evaluation and have obtained a grade for but decided not to take the final exam on the official dates (both in the 1st and 2nd call), will be graded as NOT PRESENTED.
