SUMMARY

Private International Law is a compulsory subject taught in 3rd year of the Degree in Law and 4rd and 5rd year of Double Degrees in Law (Annual, 1st quarter). Its workload is 6 credits (total dedication of students, 92 h).

In general terms, Private International Law is a field of the national legal system aimed at regulating private international relationships, i.e. those relationships containing a foreign element.

The Spanish legislator, being aware of the peculiarities of relationships with foreign elements, has designed a field of law specifically devoted to tackle and resolve this kind of issues. Thus, Private International Law shares with other areas of law the common national origin (although in the last years EU and other international sources have increasingly played a significant role in this field) but differs from them as to the object.

Through the study of this area of law students will be able to identify private international legal relationships and differentiate them from domestic private relationships, since this is the key requirement to apply this field. Students will reach a deep knowledge of the Spanish system of PIL (coming from any source, either domestic or international), in order to acquire the necessary tools to tackle and resolve cases with foreign elements that arose in daily life. This mainly means to resolve correctly the three main issues covered by this field of law: international jurisdiction of Spanish courts, the legal system to be applied to this kind of relationships (either Spanish law or foreign rules) and the recognition and enforcement of foreign decisions. Furthermore, the subject also deals with procedural issues concerning proceedings with foreign elements heard before Spanish courts.

It also requires an advanced knowledge of Civil Law, Commercial Law and Procedural Law.

TEACHING METHODOLOGY

The special nature of this field of law and the significant volume of legal instruments involved require important effort by the Lecturer and students.

Theoretical explanation. The Lecturer will present and explain in a dynamic way the basic elements which must lead students to understand the subject, using practical cases, analysis of case law and doctrine. The student shall be engaged actively to participate in the learning process by reading the Lesson before the class and using the handbook and the legislation of Private International Law in an active environment of maximum attention, silence and respect.

Applied activities. They will consist of analysis of case law and experts' reports and, above all, resolution of practical cases. They will be developed as a supplement of the theoretical classes presented by the Lecturer notwithstanding the possibility of making them outside the classroom. They will require the participation of students and each Lecturer will establish the ones which will be subject to evaluation. They will help students to become familiar with the relevant materials and legislation of this field.

Supplementary activities. Each Lecturer responsible of this subject will participate at least in a workshop or seminar related with the subject alternatively when scheduled. They will be organised either focusing particularly on matters covered only by this subject or coordinating the activity with other colleagues of other departments in those cases where the topic is interdisciplinary. In any case, these activities will be taken into consideration in the continuous assessment.

Supervised activities. The Lecturer will suggest some supervised activities, i.e. the analysis of doctrine, search of case law, preparation of practical cases. He will also consider the possibility of scheduling some activities within the workload of students aimed at strengthening their knowledge.

Office hours. Any question or concern students may have related with this subject will be resolved during the office hours every Lecturer establishes to this end.

EVALUATION

Evaluation system

A. Written and/or oral evaluation that may consist of one or several exams that may be objective and may include theoretical and practical questions and/or problems.

B. Continuous evaluation, based on the regular attendance and active participation in the proposed classroom activities, such as practical realization or participation in workshops, preparation and/or submission of papers, reports and/or presentations regarding those activities, in a collective or individual way. The implication and effort shown by the student in the process of teaching/learning during the development of such activities will be considered.

C. Continuous evaluation, based on the attendance of the student to the seminars or visits to different institutions, and, when necessary, the submission of papers, reports and/or presentations regarding those activities, in a collective or individual way. The implication and effort shown by the student in the process of teaching/learning during the development of such activities will be considered.

Grading / Weighing

A 70%

B+C 30%

Regardless of the general assessment system established for all students (written or oral exam), the lecturers responsible for the subject may determine in the Syllabus Annex the possibility of changing, well-founded, the final exam modality when they are forced to hold the exam on a date different from the official one under the rules established for coincidence of exams in the Regulations on Assessment and Grading of the Undergraduate and Master's Degrees of the University of Valencia, or any other cause established by regulation (e.g. justified force majeure). In these cases, the new type of exam to be taken must maintain the same level of difficulty as the general one.

Blank answers will not be penalised in multiple-choice examinations.

Continuous assessment will not be considered if the student does not pass the final exam. The continuous assessment mark will be kept for the second sitting. Activities of a recoverable nature may be retaken in accordance with the lecturer's instructions.

Students who have followed the continuous assessment and have obtained a grade in this regard, in the event of not taking the final exam on the official date (both in 1st and 2nd calls), will obtain the grade "NO PRESENTADO".
