SUMMARY

This subject starts from the pedagogical sense of mediation. Spaces such as family, school or community are ideal settings for the application of mediation as a socio-educational intervention strategy. Starting from a brief description of the beginnings and the legal framework in which it is based, the fundamental models and principles of the same are reviewed, emphasizing the basic singularities presented by the use of mediating techniques in the family context. Knowledge, analysis and experimentation of the process and techniques of family mediation occupy a central part in the subject, as well as the design and application of interventions from family mediation based on specific cases. Finally, it is intended to guide students in professional access to family mediation from the public and private sectors.

PREVIOUS KNOWLEDGE*RELATIONSHIP TO OTHER SUBJECTS OF THE SAME DEGREE

There are no specified enrollment restrictions with other subjects of the curriculum.

OTHER REQUIREMENTS

It is particularly related to subjects such as Identity and Ethics of the Mediator, which provides a deontological and reflective basis for the professional role of the mediator, and Intercultural Mediation and Migration, which broadens the perspective of working with families in diverse cultural contexts. It is also closely related to Community Mediation, which allows for establishing links between the family context and socio-educational action in broader social settings, as well as to Socio-Educational Policies for Mediation and Conflict Resolution in Schools, which allows for linking family mediation practice with the educational context.

In addition, it is linked to compulsory subjects such as Communication, Learning, and Social Skills Strategies, which offers basic tools for intervention with families, and International Trends in Socio-Educational Intervention, which provides a broad framework for socio-educational policies and practices in different contexts. Overall, this subject is part of a coherent itinerary within the master's degree, which contributes to the specialization of students in family mediation from a comprehensive, critical and professionalizing perspective.
